Frelimo, Lisbon Set Final Talks

Session Thursday On Independence

DAR PS SALAAM, Sept. 3 (Reuters). — The Mossmbique Liberation Front and the Portuguese government will begin formal negotiations this week to transfer power to an independent Mozambique, it was announce here today. ...

The negotiations in Lusaka, Zambia, beginning Thursday, will work out the "quickest mecha-nism" for handing over power to

The president of Freimo, Samora Machel, told a press conference at his Dar es Salaam headquarters today that he was confident the peace talks aimed at ending the 10-year-old guer-rills war—and 300 years of Portuguese rule-would be successful,

Three Months of Contacts There have been three months of contacts between the two sides, which, according to informed diplomats in the Tanzanian capital, laid the groundwork for independence and a new administration in Mozambique. The diplomats said that a basic agreement on the principle of an independent Mozambique. had n worked out three weeks ago at a secret two-day meeting in Dar es Salaam between Mr.

talks today, Mr. Machel said: "We are not going to negotiate independence. Our object is to establish the way power will be transferred to Prelimo and this corresponds with the interests of both the Mozambican and Portuguese people." Since the first tentative approaches began between the guerrilla leadership and the new rulers in Lisbon after the April coup which ousted the regime of Marcello Caetano, Frelimo has insisted that, before the war in Mozambique ends, Portugal must accept three points.

These are that Portugal recognize the inalignable right of the Mozambique people to independence, that it transfer power to the Mozambican people and that Frelimo be their sole legitimate

Mr. Machel did not say whether these points had been met. But he pointed out that the Portuguese government was negotiating only with Frelimo.

Chile Court Records Reveal Two Summary Executions

By Joseph Novitski

SANTIAGO, Sept. 2 (WP) .-Two men arrested by government investigators two weeks ago in a small town near here died the same day, each with a bullet in his head, according to the records of the Santiago Court of Appeals.

The court, in two recent decisions, agreed to extend a form of judicial protection to the widows and daughters of the dead men, both of whom were members of Marxist political parties that had supported the late President Salvador Allende.

The court action, agreeing to consider a plea to prevent any arrest order against the widows, committed to the public record what appear to have been the liest summary executions in many

It is understood that military authorities have ordered an investigation into the incident, but neither the court decisions nor any announcement of an official probe has been published in the newspapers.

Sentences Commuted

The military junta that last September overthrew Mr. Allende prohibited summary executions early this year. Furthermore, so far as is known, none of the death sentences handed down hy comts-martial has been carried out since Feb, 13. Nine death sentences for political offenses have been commuted by military commanders since then.

However, Dr. Hector Garcia, 50, a physician and member of the Socialist party, and Ruben Lamich, a 48-year-old contractor and member of the Communist party, died while in official custody, according to the cases considered by the Appeals Court. The two men were detained separately on Aug. 13, in Buin, a town just south of here. Their bodies were returned to their families through the Santiago morgue: that of Mr. Garcia on Aug. 14 and that of Mr. Lamich

Italian Communists Advance Drive for Power, Assure U.S.

By Paul Hofmann

ROME, Sept. 2 (NYT).—The Italian Communist party, stepping up a campaign aimed at obtaining a share in government power, sought yesterday to assure the United States that it would not weaken the Western alliance "What is the interest of the Western European countries and of the United States?" a spokesman for the Communist party asked rhetorically. "Are they in-terested in the kind of Italy as it is now, economically unstable and politically ungovernable? Aren't they rather interested in seeing Italy giving guarante also to them, of economic and political efficiency and security?" The implication was that cooperation between the Italian Communist party and the government would bring about stability.

The Communist spokesman Armando Cossutta, a senator and ship, made the remarks at a rally in Brescia yesterday. The text. considered a major policy state-only plausible objections to such collaboration were based on foreign policy. He recognized that Italy's allies could not remain indifferent to the type of government in this country and how political power was wielded. But he postulated that Italy would be strengthened if his party were given a role in political decision-making, and suggested that Italy's allies should be pleased rather than frightened by such a development.

"Today, the cold war is only a remembrance of the past, as are the Iron Curtain and the alleged Soviet threat," Mr. Cossutta said. "Today, new relations between the countries of the various blocs and within each bloc emerge. Today new realities are also growing within the Atlantic

Specific Tramework' Mr. Cossutta said the Italian

Communists were aware of their need to "act within the framework of a specific international geographic and political reality. meaning that they were prepared to accept the country's membership in NATO

He also said that awareness was spreading abroad "that the Communists are such a part of the Italian reality that one cannot do without them."

Turks Put Off Talks In Cyprus

Act After Finding A Mass Grave

NICOSIA, Sept. 2.—Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash today postponed his first formal scheduled talks with President Glafkos Clerides after Turkish troops uncovered a mass grave of scores of bodies in a Turkish Cypriot village.

A United Nations spokesman said the talks, scheduled to have started tonight in Nicosia's Ledra Palace Hotel, have now heen postponed until Friday, But Mr. Denktash said he considered appointment "provisions

A Turkish Cypriot spokerman said searchers had recovered 35 bodies, all of them badly mutilated, from the grave discovered last night in the village of Ma-ratha, north of Famagusta on the eastern coast. He said he expected to find perhaps 40 more.

Pay Level Is Greater Worry For Germans Than Inflation

By Craig R. Whitney

BONN, Sept. 2 (NYT).-West Germany, with 7 per cent, has the lowest rate of inflation of any major industrial power this year. possibly because the problem of constantly rising prices has become virtually a national preoccupation.

But two young couples-one living comparatively well in Frank-furt and the other in Bonn on a meager income—give a different impression of the way individual Germans look at inflation than that given by the constant talk, worry and hand-wringing of government officials, businessmen and iournalists.

"For us, personally, inflation isn't really a problem-for banks and governments, maybe it is." said Klaus-Dietrich von Schilling. a baron and law student who lives on $130 a week here with his

Reactor Leak Halts Japan A-Ship Tests

TOKYO, Sept. 2.—Japan's first nuclear ship has suspended a test run because of indications that its reactor was leaking radioactivity, officials said today.

Monitoring posts aboard the 8.214-ton freighter Mutsu regis-tered the abnormality yesterday during the initial test run in the Pacific, about 500 miles off northern Japan, officials at the Nuclear Ship Development Agency re-

They said there was no immediate danger to anyone aboard the ship and the cause of the trouble was being investigated

The ship, completed two years ago, left its home port of Mutsu, 350 miles north of Tokyo, on Aug. 26 for its first sengoing trials.

Contamination Fear It had been tied up for 22 months because of opposition from local fishermen, who said it could contaminate the ocean with activity.

On Aug. 25, fishermen hinder-ed the vessel's departure by lashing 60 fishing boats together and to the Mutsu to prevent it from leaving port

Bad weather forced them to abandon the protest after 15 The Mutsu's reactor leakage became apparent on Wednesday. after the ship sailed 500 miles out, powered by its auxiliary diesel engine. Mutsu city's leftist mayor, Kanji Kikuchi, said today he would not allow the ship to return to the port. The return is scheduled for Sunday.

Meanwhile, Japan's acting chief cabinet secretary. Tokusaburo Kosaka, said that the government would investigate the leakage.

Selassie Target Of Addis Ababa Demonstration

ADDIS ABABA, Sept. 2 (Reuters).--Several thousand demon-strators chanting "Hang the Empercr" and "The Emperor is a thief" paraded through the cap-It was the first street protest against Emperor Haile Selassie since the armed forces started stripping him of his powers in Tonight, the Armed Forces Committee, which has been careful not to more against the 82year-old Emperor in person, banned any further such actions. The demonstration, led by university students, started from the university and grew as it progressid through Addis Ababa's main streets. It went past the wife, Branca, and their two-yearold son. Alexander. "It's not infistion that muts fine clothes and good furniture beyond our reach." he said. "It's our low income."

On the other side of the coin, "rising prices don't really make us stop buying anything," said Erika Gribble, who is helping her American husband, Thomas, to get through a doctoral program on her salary of about $300 a week in Frankfurt. She is a buyer for an American department store chain. "We just spend more. Maybe we spent $40 more for food last month," Mrs. Gribble

Germans sometimes call th' an "inflation mentality," meaning that people accept and even expect prices to rise steadily. One reason may be that nearly a" "mployed West German workers, except the self-employed and farmers, are receiving compensation for inflation in their paychecks. This, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said in a recent interview, is "in itself an accelerating source of

Mrs. Gribble, for instance, received a 10 per cent pay increase this month to cover the effects of inflation during the 13 months she has been working for the Kay department stores, Mr. von Schilling, whose income in the last phase of his law studies is being supplied by the state received the same 10 per cent to 11 per cent inflation increase that all federal employees got.

Fatalism on Prices There is some fatalism about rising prices. "We only have about 500 marks a month left over afrent, taxes, insurance and fixed monthly bills," said Mr. von Schilling, referring to the equivalent of $200. "We spend most of that on food, because we eat all our meals here." The you Schillings live in a modest apartment in a small house on the Rhine, in Mehlem, a suburb of Bonn, The rent, about $165 did not go up this year-"inckily,"

Mr. von Schilling says.

Food prices in West Germany are extremely high. A pound of the best filet steak costs $5.54, and a pound of butter is $1.50. One reason is a proliferation of small stores that are protected from competition by a nationwide law that shnts even supermarkets at 6:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and at 1:30 p.m. Saturdays. Comparison shopping is thus impossible for most working people and retail profit margins are high. Wholesale food dealers sell for 30 to 40 per cent less than the prices paid by the average shopper. "Here, in Mehlem, there are only one or two shops, so there's no competition," Mrs. von Schilling. who was born in Yugo-slavia, said. "Things are 10 to 15 per cent more expensive than in Bonn but it's hard for me to get down there often."

The Gribbles can save a little more in Frankfurt, which is a large, cosmopolitan city with such things as discoont stores, unheard of in Bonn. "We buy mostly hamburger, chicken and some-times yeal," said Mr. Gribble, who is working on a thesis concerning the writer Evelyn Waogh. "If filet was cheaper, we'd buy more of it. But we lived almost three years in Wales, when I was studying, and the rise in prices was really much more noticeable there than it has been here."

Mrs. Gribble's parents own the fifth-floor apartment in which she and her husband live, near the old 1. G. Farben building, and charge only 150 marks a month, about $50, for it. Most West Germans did not give up summer vacations abroad because of inflation, and neither did Thomas and Erika Gribble: they spent three weeks in Italy and Switzerlaod, in the spring. They made the trip in a new, green Volks-wagen "beetle" for which they paid $3,000 cash in May. "We don't buy on credit." Mrs. Gribble said. "You either have the money or you don't buy

Armed Police Reserve Unit Will Be Increased in Ulster

BELFAST, Sept. 2 (UPD.— Northern Ireland Secretary Merlyn Rees today announced plans to increase the armed police reserves to combat violence by Roman Catholic and Protestant

Mr. Rees said that he planned to boost the 2,500-man police reserve to a total of 6,000, includ-ing 1,300 women. He also said that Britain planned to pull 1,000 troops out of Northern Ireland

The plan appeared to be a compromise between threats by the majority Protestant and minority Roman Catholic communities to set up their own private armies. Protestant spokesmen demanded that the government authorcounter the gunmen and bombers of the Irish Republican Army on a local level. The Catholics said that, if this were authorized, they would create a "people's army" in their areas.

Mr. Rees said that members of the reinforced police reserve could be armed at all times and could set up "community polics centers" in their areas under control of the chief constable of the regular police.

The reserve police, made up of part-time policemen, carries out patrol and surveillance duties to assist the regular force. Violence involving the rival communities and the British Army has taken 1,066 lives in the last five years.

Mr. Rees said that he hoped his plan could help lighten the burden of security duties on the 15,000 British troops in the province.

Relieve the Army

The plan "should be acceptable to both majority and minority and so gradually relieve the army of duties which it is not design-ed to undertake," he said.

The army said that at least three: gunmen fired across the Irish Republic border near Middietown, 50 miles south of Belfast, early today in a brief clash with an army patrol manning a road checkpoint.

A spokesman said that the

Consultation Is Infrequent

Americans Take Poor View Of Lawyers, Survey Shows

By Warren Weaver Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (NYT). -The first attempt / the legal profession to determine how broadly and effectively it is serving the public indicates that about a third of the American people have never consulted a lawyer about a personal problem.

these key results:
"Do you think Nixon should or Of those who have sought legal should not be tried for possible advice, a survey commissioned by the American Bar Association shows, nearly half—43 per cent— have only discussed a single problem with a lawyer during their lifetime.

Preliminary results of the study offer some possible explanations for the relatively infrequent consultation: A large majority of those questioned be-lieves that lawyers charge more for their services than they are worth, while a narrower majority finds all legal fees unfair. Middle Left Out

In recent years, the legal pro-fession has become increasingly concerned over criticism that its services are available to the wealthy, who can afford high fees, and to the poor, through subsidized government programs. but not to the great mass of Americans in between.

As a result, the ABA created in 1971 a special committee on legal needs headed by Randolph Thrower, former commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service. That group, in turn, hired the National Opinion Research Center, a nonprofit adjunct of the University of Chicago, to find out how often people use lawyers and how they regard report noted that twothirds of the people interviewed had had "only very limited pro-fessional exposure" to lawyers, having consulted one once or not

"Although the experience of consulting a lawyer is widely shared—perhaps more widely than some would have expected this experience is generally rather thin," the study observed.
"Only 11.6 per cent of the whole sample reported having professional exposure to three or more they are figured. Agreed, 76 to 17, that many matters lawyers handle, such as tax questions and estate planning, can be done as well and less expensively by nonlawyers, such as accountants, bank officers and insurance agents. Even when a majority of those interviewed was favorable to the legal profession, disagreement was sometimes embarrassingly large. For example, 32 per cent disagreed that judges are generally selected from the most able members of the legal pro-

U.S. Agency Readies Plan to Create Jobs

By Edwin L. Dale Jr. WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (NYT). Secretary of Labor Peter Brennan announced yesterday that his department has prepared a program of gradually rising payments to local governments to create jobs if national unemployment

Mr. Brennan said that under this proposa: a very large program of "public service employment" -amounting to about 800,000 jobs-would not be "triggered" until the national memployment rate reached "around 7 per cent." It is now 5.3 per cent.

Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has backed a proposal of Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., that would initiate a program of about $4 billion for public-service jobs if the unemployment rate reached 6 per cent. President Ford has promised "compassionate" consideration of the idea but has made no com-

Mr. Brennan was interviewed on the CBS network's "Face the Nation" television program. His department administers the relatively small existing program of grants to state and local governments for the purpose of creating jobs. He disclosed this schedule of proposed increases:

• If unemployment reached 5.5 per cent, the present program of about $500 million-creating just under 100,000 jobs-would be slightly more than doubled.

 If the jobless rate should rise to 6 per cent, $1 billion more would be added for an additional 200,000 jobs.

 If the rate rose to "around 7 per cent," the program would be expanded to create "about 800,-000 public-service jobs" in all, which would cost at least $4

The problem with the plan is that it would further add to government spending and the budget deficit. Mr. Brennan's disclosure yesterday indicated that the administration was likely to favor a somewhat more cautious and conservative plan than that backed hy Mr. Burns and Sen, Javits, on which hearings will begin shortly in the Senate Labor Com-

Agency Admits Oil Firms Got Bargain on U.S. Shale Tract

By Morton Mintz

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (WP). -Interior Department officials have acknowledged that a federal oil shale tract leased to two major oil companies for $2103 million could be worth up to $1.5 billion. That sum is 268 times as much as department estimators originally had figured the tract would

The $1.5-billion figure derives from a computer analysis requested by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House Small Business subcommittee that investigated the department's oil shale leasing policies early this year. The analysis appears as an appendix in the hearing record, just published

The tract was the first of six which the department leased as part of its prototype oil shale program. The oil companies, Gulf and Standard of Indiana submitted the joint bid of $210,3 million which exceeded seven others ranging hetween $16 million and $175 million and which the Interior Department accepted Jan. 17.

After an investigation by the subcommittee staff, Interior officials conceded at a Jan. 2 hearing that the evaluation made by the department was "significantly less than $9 million." This turned out to be $5.6 million.

Question Raised

At the hearing, Rep. Dingell asked whether the tract might not have been worth more even than the $210.3 million, pointing out that the department "would have no way of knowing because its $5.6-million evaluation was so grossly erroneous as to be of no use at all in assessing the acceptability of the blds."

Reid Stone, the department's oil shale coordinator, acknowledged that the tract evaluation committee—five department employees whose fdentities were kent secret-had "locked in" the $5.6million evaluation on Sept. 25, when the price of crude oil was $3.89 a barrel. The committee had assumed that a price of under $4 would still be prevailing in the 1980s, when shale oil from the tract would come onto the market. By the time of the sale, however, "old" oil was selling at a controlled price of $5.25 and uncontrolled "new" oil for more than $10 Moreover, the Federal Energy Office was saying that to make oil shale and other alternative fuel sources attractive, the average price for all oil should rise over the long term to $7 But, Mr. Stone admitted to Rep.

Dingell, the department took into account neither the price rises nor the view of the UN Energy Office before making the sale to Gulf-Blandard The department said that had the evaluation committee assumed a $7 price, it would have calculated a value for the tract of $485.6 million. The great increase over the valuation of $5.6 million at $3.89 a barrel reflects a high profit ratio once production costs are

However, as a result of a departmental review of the Interior Department's oil shale programs and procedures, revised evaluation procedures were adopted. These resulted in a much lower estimate of the tract's value. assuming the same $7 price, of

The $210-million bid should have been rejected, Rep. Dingell said. "An immensely valuable public asset was turned over to oil industry control for a fraction of its real value," he added.

Ford Signs Law To Aid Pensions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP) Signing into law a new pension reform hill on Labor Day, President Ford called it "a landmark measure that may finally give the American worker solid protection in his pension plan."

Haig Will Stay As Aide to Ford

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (Reuters).-Gen. Alexander Haig jr., White House chief of staff, has agreed to a request by President Ford to stay in office, the White House said today.

Presidential spokesman J.F. ter-Horst said Gen. Haig "is aboard for the duration."

There have been a number of reports of friction between aides in the Nixon administration and Mr. Ford's men. Top Ford advisers, the reports said, have nrged the President to drop Gen. Haig because of his close identification with the former President's demands and back them up, that

Mr. Brennan, too, said workers were entitled to catch up, but asserted that "the unions should try to hold [demands] within what the increase in costs has been." He added that "management has to realize that if the labor group is willing to do this, then they have to do something about taking a smaller profit and do something about their prices that are holding costs up.'

Mr. Meany, in a gloomy as sessment of the economic outlook, warned earlier of a possible depression and has called for a change in policies that he said had restricted credit, led to high interest rates and raised the specter of increasing unemploy-

Mr. Meany spoke favorably of President Ford. He said that his eccession to the presidency was "refreshing" and that it was a "relief to get rid of what we had in the White House."

"I think Gerald Ford is what he appears to be." Mr. Meany said. "I don't expect any miracles from him... this economic thing is going to be a terrific burden. Whether they can turn it around or not, I don't know."

In a luncheon and interview bere, Mr. Meany expressed particular concern about the eco-nomic situation. He said the country was already in a recession and that there was "every indication that we are going into a depression," which he predicted would be even bigger than in the thirtles "unless there is a quick

If you're looking for Jack Daniel's, here are some very nice places to find it.

Recent additions to our Distillery enable us to ship more Jack Daniel's overseas. Sadly, the quantity is still limited. But the quality is worth a visit to any of the restaurants, bars and hotels listed below.

There, you'll discover that Jack Daniel's is neither bourbon nor scotch. It's in a special category which the U.S. government calls by a special name: Tennessee Whiskey. Each drop is seeped through twelve feet of hard maple charcoal to smooth its taste before aging. And because other whiskeys aren't made this way, other whiskeys aren't as smooth.

Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey. Once you find it, we believe you'll like it. No matter what you've been drinking.

The Shrinking World

There is, of course, excitement in the flight of an American SR-71 across the Atlantic in less than two hours. When contrasted with the 10 weeks (admittedly nearly a month was spent in the Canaries) of Columbus's first voyage from Palos to San Salvador, or even the 33 1/2 hours of Charles A. Lindbergh's solo to Paris, the figures become fascinating.

Yet the technological triumph of the SR-71 was something in common with breaking the 4-minute mile in foot racing. It does not constitute one of those quantum jumps in transportion like the slow and chiefly winddriven voyage of the steamship Savannah across the Atlantic in 1819, or the islandhopping flight of the seaplane NC-4 in 1919. Rather, it may be compared to the steamship races of the earlier twentieth century, when hours clipped off a transatiantic crossing won headlines, while the little planes of that day were just testing their frail winge

What really counts in these days is that it is possible for someone to recall that his firet journey from America to Europe by slow boat took 10 days; his second, less than 20 years later, 10 hours by Constellation; now, he could halve that-or, if comething like the Concorde were placed in regular service. reduce the time to less than a third. And. by the same token, whereas the two continents were once linked by words alunewire or wireless-it is now possible for Americans to watch Churchill's funeral, or Europeans to see Nixon's resignation, by television waves, bounced off a satellite. The world has grown very small in one generation.

But our globe has been shrinking in other ways too. In Bucharest, just a little while ago, representatives of many nations talked about the impact of growing populations upon diminishing world resources, and came to very ineffectual conclusions. Dogmas clashed, while hunger grew. In transportation, high prices for oil have meant higher costs for travelers; with respect to food supplies they have meant less fertilizer and thus less to eat. But so far as policy went-and it goes very far in determining the shape of the world's destiny-the national and ideological reactions to the problem had all the breadth of view of a Cortez or a Pizarro setting out to loot Aztecs or Incas, or a Drake raiding the Spanish fleets for that

That collective policies have not kept pace with technological advances is an old, if valid, complaint. What can be said for dashing across the Atlantic at three times the speed of sound is that it does make the peoples of the world neighbors to one another-selfish and greedy, perbaps, but at least aware of what goes on across the backyard fence. One thousand could die in a Chinese flood, and the effects were manifested slowly and obscurely to the rest of the world. Now a drought in the sub-Sahara is vivid to all: now it is far less possible to be isolated from distant human woes, far easier to give speedy help. That the world is shrinking has become a cliché-but a cliché is only a repetition of the obvious. And when harsh facts are obvious they are not as easy to rationalize out of mind as when they appear in the guise of subtle theories.

The transition from Richard Nixon's clandestine and oligarchical reign to the open presidency ushered in so appealingly by Gerald Ford has already done much to rekindle public faith in the integrity of constitutional government. Durable confidence in the President's capacity to deal with the nation's problems, however, calls for a swift recognition in the White House that this restoration of public trust cannot long survive on a diet solely of relief, and euphoria. Dismantling the Nixon administration's machinery for national mastery must be viewed as only a prelude to positive planning and effective leadership.

President Ford has shown that he understands the need to revive the consultative aspects of the presidency, relying in full public view on the capacities to be drawn from the departments of the executive branch. Congress and the legitimate voices of a variety of constituencies. Yet, it would be no service to his administra country to relax in any way the public pressure on the President to chart a course-and on Congress to take seriously its legislative responsibilities to cope with the vast accumulation of domestic and foreign problems.

We respect the President's declaration that, in banishing any vestige of the Watergate spirit from the executive branch, "the code of ethics that will be followed will be the example that I set." Mr. Ford's precept takes poignancy from the disaster that had its roots in the negative example set by his predecessor. But it is also clear that, beyond the reach of the President's official family, there remains need for concrete and preventive action. - A collective congressional sigh of relief is no substitute for reform.

Last week's presidential news conference, too, while reassuring in its air of straightforwardness and good humor, provided little by way of answer to many of the urgent problems facing the country. To identify inflation as public enemy number one is a long way from arresting it; and it may well be misleading to suggest, as Mr. Ford did, that its arrest would mean that "most of our domestic . . . problems will be solved." Unemployment, for one, might well be aggravated by an over-exuberant application of

It would be unreasonable so soon to expect many hard answers from the new President. But it will be counterproductive. and ultimately dangerous, to let good feeling become a blinder shutting out awareness of the need for effective policies.

France and the Arms Race

It is true that important exports help increase the defense capacity of France—by widening the basis of its military industry and therefore by increasing its technological level and by making its productions prof-

Ultimately, and this is the most frequent argument, one may argue there are arms merchants everywhere in the world and that one country's refusal to take part in the race does not prevent wars from breaking

The fact remains that this role of a "merchant of weapons" shocks rightly those in France who base themselves on moral-Christian or other-principles.

Why should one not undertake the gradual reconversion of these armament industries which Giscard d'Estaing had said he wanted to do and steer the export effort towards capital goods and especially machine tools which so specessfully insure a trade surplus to West Germany?

Why not to try in the meantime to seek with the big powers "a normalization" of the trade and end the morally and politically disastrous sales race?

At etake is not only the image France wants to have abroad but also the image Frenchmen have of their own country.

-From Le Monde (Paris). Schmidt's Visit to Paris

Perhaps the most significant fact of the chancellor's Paris visit at this stage is the speed at which it has been arranged. The two men have met frequently since they came to office. And it is this habit of easy meeting without superfluous diplomatic protocol, which offers the best hope of a meeting of minds on the political and economic problems of Europe. By implication it underlines Britain's uneasy position on the sidelines of the community in the waiting period before the general election.

T OS ANGELES—At least, at last, we are here. Our bundles, boxes and suitcases are all tucked away in the closets and cupboards. and we sit on a couch in the apartment that was rented for us, trying to understand all that

Representatives of the Jewish Family Service who rented the apartment met us at the airport this morning and brought us here, They are now attempting to explain to us in a mixture of that they will be taking care of us in the future, Much has been said about the exchange of information, about channels of communication, the quality of information, and so on. Much has also been said about interfering with freedom of information. It seems to me that very little can be added to what the Americans saw recently with their own eyes,

Television programs were beamed from Moscow, Academician Andrei Sakharov, one of the top thinkers of our times, discusses the future of humanity, the fate of his country, problems of civilization and suddenly, someone pushes a button or pulls a lever and the screen goes blank, No fuss, no problem, no intellectual dilemma everything is peace and

No Exposure

If this is what they can do while the whole world is watching, imagine what is done inside the country, quietly without attracting attention, After all, if there is no exposure there can be no embarrassment

All information about life outside the Soviet Union is carefully chosen, gleaned, screened and edited. After the process is com-plete, the Soviet people end up with rather wild ideas about what life in America is like. Soviet propaganda has two standard descriptions of Americe: "It's rotting away." and "It's teetering on the brink of selfdestruction." Half a century has gone by, and it's still "rotting" and "on the brink" Significant numbers of Soviet citizens are convinced that even today American workers live in slums (not the kind you see in Los Angeles's Watts, but genuine as as described in Marxist classics), that the working man is powerless and is being exploited by savage capitalist em-ployers, and that it goes without saying that blacks are being lynched all over the place on a daily basis It must be admitted that the spirit of détente did affect official anti-Americanism to some extent. The main thesis remained the same, but here and there we saw slight modifications A case in point was a series of travel articles by two Soviet journalists—Peskov and Streinikov-which were published last year in Komsomolskaya Pravda

just before Leonid Brezhnev's

visit to the United States. The two journalists described their journey by car across America. They discovered that not everything was completely repulsive. They wrote that the countryside was quite beautiful, that birch trees grew in America (previously it was assumed that they grew only in Russia), that the highways were quite good and that next to the main roads they found many diners and restaurants which served hamburgers

The series of articles created a sensation in Moscow. They were read, reread, alipped and lent to friends, "Just think of the objectivity," we said among had difficulty in believing it. In fact, a Czech journalist whom I met in Moscow three years ago refused to believe it. And only after he was verbally abused and called a traitor by a passerby, who identified him as a Czech did he begin to understand how truly popular the Soviet government's actions were. So now back to the question of plastic palm trees. When the people of a giant country which possesses possibly the highest war potential in the world are constantly misinformed, when they are told that their country is surrounded by victous enemies who are bent on war because they are on the brink of destruction anyway and war presents their only chance of survival-then, I suggest, the situation is fraught with danger for all of us. Under these conditions, the problem of freedom of information can no longer remain an "internal"

beard for the first time the words of Abraham Lincoln: "You can fool some of the people all of the time, you can fool all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time." I respect this great American and his ideas, but I really can't find it in my heart to accept these words. Fifty years and 200 million people-isn't this all of the people and all of

And let's not forget the schoolteachers, those near illiterates who took the jobs of decent men who were forced into retirement by the regime. Write it all down. Write it all down."

There was not a single demurrer in the cramped side-street cafe in this city of 38,000, capital of the island of Euboea, the kind of place which is trying to decide whether it belongs to the Greece of new-if now mostly emptytourist hotels or to the Greece of sheep, olives and black-clad wom-

Air Fares

The report "Airlines" New Fare Boost Rid Based on Cartel Expectations" which appeared on Page 3 of your Aug. 31 edition overlooks certain basic facts in respect of the position of the vernments in this complex

In May of this year, representatives of the U.S., Canadian and European governments meeting in Paris stated that the overall economic results of scheduled and non-scheduled North Atlantic operators have been unsatisfactory for a number of years, that the situation was worsening in 1974 and that, desuite the increases in fares already made, a further increase in aggregate airline revenues should be schieved. The Paris meeting issued firm official "Guidelines" for upcoming tariffs negotiations, calling for an increase in aggregate airline revenues. a closer relationship between air-fares and costs, the lowest scheduled fares to be cost related and with a reasonable relationship to charter prices, and the establishment minimum charter price regime. nautics Board issued a parallel policy statement detailing a similar approach and, in particular, calling for the highest priority "to reduce significantly the spread between the normal or substantially raise the [level of the] 22/45-day individual excursion fare." The governments on both sides of the Atlantic clearly desire an integrated pricing structure for this major route, and recent negotiations have been conducted against this background. The scheduled atrimes are not pressing for a charter rate minimum 946 to $81 below the lowest fare on a regular scheduled flight as stated in your report. In a move to allay the concern expressed by the charter operators, they

The scheduled airlines, in a further move to reassure the charter operators, have also agreed voluntarily to restrict their sales of the Apex fare to 20 per cent of their individual weekly especity on the route.

It should also be understood that all commercial air service is based on formal bilateral ments concerned. Such bileterals stipulate that the designated flag carriers of each of the governments will negotiate and agree the tariffs to be applied, and submit them for government approvals. The IATA traffic conference machinery merely provides the necessary forum in which the operating airlines can negotiate interrelated tariffs to meet the conditions of these various bilaterals. IATA, as such, controls neither the market, which is determined by the government bilaterals, the production, in terms of the capacity which each individual sirline decides to offer

Channel Storm Sinks 20 British Boats: No Deaths

LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP).-Gales lashed the English Channel last night and British coastguards said today that at least 20 small boats were sunk in and around the Thames Estuary. No deaths or unjuries were reported.

Twenty-two persons were reported missing at one stage, but the coastguards said that all were saved. The seven Thames Estuary lifeboats were at sea all night to rescue small boats.

The coastguards of southeast England said it was "lucky" that no lives were lost since many boatmen had been unprepared for the storm. They had set out "de-spite very squally conditions and adverse weather reports," the coastguards said. The pirate radio ship Amiga, anchored 20 miles off the Essex coast, reported that it could see a motor launch in danger of breaking up in heavy seas. The Walton lifeboat was at see all night, first searching for the aunch, the Moonraker, and then escorting it to port, a coastguards, pokesman said.

Palestinians Reportedly Seek Open Consultations With U.S.

By Maurice Guindi

CAIRO, Sept. 2 (UPI). - The Palestinian Liberation Organization has communicated to the United States Its readiness to have direct, high-level consultations on the Palestinian problem. a source close to the PLO said

The only condition the PLO attaches to such meetings, he said, is that they be publicized and not beld secretly.

The PLO communicated this provision to the United States through "third parties" including Arab, Asian and African countries "which enjoy a good standing in Washington," the source said.

The approach was first made about a month ago and was re-newed last week.

'Ready and Willing'

"The PLO is ready and willing to have consultations with U. S. officials on a high level so long as they are held openly and for all to see—as has been the case in Palestinian consultations with the Soviet Union," the source

This is the first time the PLO has taken concrete action for direct contacts with the United States, be said.

There has been no definite response from Washington so far, he said, but first indications were that the United States would prefer any meetings with the Palestinians to be beld in secret. Fears of possible repercussions in Israel are believed to be the main reason behind the desire for secrecy, he said. The PLO leader, Yassir Arafat, has been to Moscow several times on publicized trips. The latest was in July when be met with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and other officials. The source said that one possibility the PLO had in mind is a meeting between Mr. Arafat and Secretary of State Henry Kis-singer when the latter visits the Middle East later this year.

He said a primary concern of the PLO in any contacts with the United States would be to explain its position that the Palestinian problem should be

Peace Talks For Manila, Rebels Set Up Visiting Moslem Aide

Arranges a Parley

From Wire Dispatches
MANILA, Sept. 2.—The secretary-general of the Islamic Conference announced tonight that he has arranged peace talks be-tween the Philippine government and leaders of the Moslem rebels in the southern Philippines.

Mohammed Hassan cl-Tohami of Egypt made the announcement before his departure after an 11-day tour of the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia. This plan of conciliation is fundamentally based on full respect of the sovereignty and in-tegrity of the Republic of the Philippines," he said.

He added that the negotiators for the rebcls would be "the ideological Moslem leaders who truly represent the aspirations and ideology of the Filipinn Moslem community." He said that he had been given a mandate to arrange the latks

by the Fifth Islamic Conference, held in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in June, and had the help of oliter states in the region. Military sources said, in: an-while, that Philippine troops on the island of Mindanso today recaptured the coastal town of Balabagan from Moslem reticls who had held it for nine cays.

In driving off the rct; is, the government troops freed about 1,500 civilians from a nearby farm where they had laben refuge, the sources said. There was no report of casualties.

The city of 25,000, situated 500 miles south of Manila, was the second Mindanae town captured by rebels in a month.

Brig, Gen, Pedro Zafra, military commander in the area, said that about 700 Moslems stand the predominantly Moslom town on Aug. 24.

He asserted that American icaging companies in the area laid given refuge to insurgents as insurance against hareson, nt. He said he had recommended that the government lake over their concessions.

DANCE

Contrasting Harlem and Israel

By Oleg Kerensky

ONDON, Sept. 2 (IHT) .- Following hard on the heels of the dance theater of Harlem at Sadler's Wells Theatre, the Bat-Dor dance company of Israel could hardly provide a greater contrast. The New York blacks mixed classical ballet and revuestyle exuberance in such an exhilarating, if crude, way that they roused audiences to wild enthusiasm and have been in-vited back to Sadler's Wells for seven extra performances next

The Bat-Dor dancers mix vaguely Martha Graham barefoot technique with a repertoire of anxiety-ridden works by minor choreographers in a way which has a distinctly lowering effect. After some items the curtain has had to be raised in near silence, in a desperate effort to generate applause Bat-Dor means contemporary and the company is the second modern dance ensemble to be formed and financed in Israel by Batsheva de Rothschild. The Batsheva company, named after its foundress, has works by many of the world's leading choreographers and has acquired a favorable international reputation. Bat-Dor claims to be more classical: Jeannette Ordman, its artistic director and leading dancer, started her eareer in South Africa in classical ballet. But there is no sign of classical technique or style in the repertoire being presented in London.

The main interest centered on the premieres of two works by Rudi Van Dantzig, the most distinguished choreographer represented in this season. Unaccountably, neither was given on the first night and, owing to an injury to one of the dancers, neither of them finally appeared until the third program, seen yesterday. "Couples" proved to be a mildly agreeable work in which the boys and girls were bright, striped bathing suits and went through a variety of shared emotions. "Movements in a Rocky Landscape" was more ambitious, with a group of three men end a woman halandno precariously on white boxes (one of them fell off) and with the woman going off from time to time to change her dress. The program note says "for each of the three men, the woman seems to have a different personality," but Miss Ordman did not succeed in conveying any person-ality whatever. The finale, with one man lying alone on a box on one side of the stage gazing

at his three companions on the other, scarcely conveyed the idea that "finally, one of the four is rejected and finds peace, alone." Although the other works in the Bat-Dor repertoire are by many different choreographers most of them suffer from similar faults of obscurity, pretentiousness and plain duliness. Many of them also suffer from Miss Ordman's evident determination to take most of the leading parts herself. She is noticeably older and heavier than the rest of her company and she might be better advised to concentrate on her evident skills as an organizer and director. She has succeeded in assembling a very likable ought now to give them more opportunities The most successful works were Lar Lubovitch's "Whirligogs," quite a lively and amusing series of chaotic dances to the mixture of voices and music forming a movement of Berio's

ENTERTAINMENT IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (IHT). This is how critics for The New York Times rate new stage

"The Importance of Being Karnest" as a musical is undermined "by a generally standard score and some determined, hotsy-totsy burlesque," Howard Thompson says. Otherwise, the show at the off Off-Broadway Nighthouse might have clicked, Thompson says. "Bobby Mazza's set, for in-stance, is deftly simple and pretty. The costumes range from pretty to Christmas Tree-Regency camp, which is OK. Two of the most amusing performances, curiously apt, are a Lady Bracknell and a Gwendolen done by Michael Arian and Byron Thomas,"

"Kismet," now being presented in the parks of New York by the Alliance of Latin Arts, a musicaltheater workshop for the Spanish and Puerto Ricans, would be hard to beat for fun, color, melody and professionalism, Howard Thompson says. The show, with a score cleverly streamlined from Borodin for Broadway by Robert Wright and George Forrest, matches the original Broadway musical of 1953 in spirit and basic production values, Thompson says. "Raul Davila sings superbly in the central role... and has first-rate singing and flanking by Rafael La Bron, Constance Velero, Mar-friend killed in the recent Israeli-Arab war which starts with a very moving tableau of four near-naked wounded soldiers, and possibly Paul Sanssardo's "Carnival, the only light-hearted plece in the repertoire. Mr. Sagan's "Requiem for Sounds," danced partly to what seemed like a recording of leeding time at the soo and partly to Samuel Barber's lovely "Adagio for Strings," contained some remarkably ugly and ludicrous movements, especially the ending with the boys crawling sideways across the stage on all fours, with the girls balanced on their backs. Other Embarragements .It is not worth cataloguing all the other embarrassments of this repertoire. Each has his own favorite: I nearly had a hysterical fit in Paul Sanasardo's "Metallics" when Miss Ordman repeatedly dashed behind some hanging metal rods and loudly crashed them together. But it was in Manuel Alum's "Palomas," in which the women jumped around in a circle like physical fitness enthusiasts on a beach. that one member of the audience shouted "Boo! Bloody rubbish!" No credit to the Sadler's Wells house manager who tried to evict this gentleman for causing a dis-turbance; after all, nobody tries to evict people who cheer or a performance.

"And After ... " a tribute to a

Mr. Alum's "Juna" consisted mainly of Miss Ordman taking off various cardigans and going to sleep and dreaming of other people taking off their cardigans. a sound score of sirens, whistles and applause while Yehuda Maor's "Cuts" bad a group of six dancers twitching and shaking to similar noises, ending with five of them falling flat on the floor while the sixth stared out at the audience with a shocked expression and his arms raised in surprise or shout "bravo" in the middle of

I do not know how all this goes down in Israel: the English are more indulgent to their own modern dance groups, doing not so very different kinds of things, than they have been to these visitors. But if Bat-Dor wants to visit countries with considerable experience of the world of dance. Miss Ordman must find better and more cheerful choreographers, persuade them to use more attractive or interesting music, and impose a self-denying ordinance on her own dancing ambitions. Meanwhile, the season continues at Sadler's Wells Theatre until Sunday.

NEW YORK (NYT).—The business is called The Organizing Principle, and Stephanie Winston, who conceived it little less than a year ago, admits that "it's a hard concept to grasp."

"People say, "So you organize, so what do you do?" she said, somewhat ruefully.

Miss Winston organizes almost anything. She'll arrange jumbled files, books and financial records, devise efficient use of space in closets, cabinets and other storage areas, and plan personal and household budgets. She'll also organize efficient traffic flows in

To date, Miss Winston has organized research files for a writer, organized and maintained contributor and supporter lists for a political candidate and arrang-ed a library for a city councilman. She's also set up a kitchen in a way she believed would be most practical and efficient for the owner, with commonly used items most readily accessible and utensils placed in relationship to where they would be used.

"I had no idea of how many people felt truly uncomfortable because some system in their lives wasn't working," she said. "For some, the act of putting things in order is cathartic."

"Some people just don't know how to go about getting organiz-ed; others do, but they let things get out of hand," she said. A graduate of Barnard College and a free-lance book editor, Miss Winston brings to her business a 'basic instinct" and a temperament for organization. Her personal life is organized "most of the time," she said, and when it isn't, it's soon brought up to

Although she enjoys every aspect of her business, she is particularly fascinated with household organizing 'because it's

"I believe that running a household is a true executive-adminis-trative enterprise," she said. "People may sniff at housewifery but, longer than expected.

Miss Winston got the idea for her business late last year when a friend mentioned a notice posted in a supermarket, offering assistance in moving. Initial Flash

"I suddenly thought, Eureka, maybe I can help people get themselves together on a large scale," she said. "But after the initial flash, I didn't know how realistic it was. I decided to try it because everyone I spoke to thought it was a good idea." One of her most interesting recent projects was undertaken for a psychotherapist who works

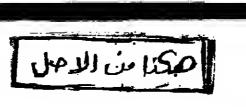

When she called me, things were a mess," Miss Winston re-called. "All her correspondence, business and personal, bills and professional materials were tucked into shopping bags. NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (NYT).-The output of the U.S. economy fell in the first quarter of this year by $10 billion to $30 billion as a result of the Arab oil embargo, according to a report released in Washington by the Federal Energy Administration.

The report, entitled "The economic impact of the oil embargo on the American economy," also found that the embargo reduced the civilian labor force by approximately 500,000 people, mostly in the automotive areas, and caused a sharp upturn in the consumer price index through increased energy prices.

"This paper is a preliminary attempt to analyze the impact that energy-scarcity problems have upon the United States' economy," the report stated. "It shows that energy shortages are as potentially damaging as failures of the economic system to fully employ labor and capital."

The report, prepared by the FEA's office of economic impact, emphasized that it was "difficult to separate the effects of the embargo from events that would have occurred without the embargo," and added that its pur-

The central bank said it believed that part of the payments deficit was caused by capital transfers abroad on the part of West German industry in the form of export credits.

The current account for July showed a surplus of 1.559 billion DM against a surplus of 837 million DM in June and a deficit of 373 million DM a year earlier. LONDON, Sept. 2 (AP-DJ) -British industry's capital spending in the second quarter totaled £1.066 hillion, down about 3.3 per cent from the first period's £1.102 billion, the Department of Industry reports. The figures, seasonally adjusted at 1970 prices are provisional. Capital spending in the manufacturing sector totaled £515 million in the second quarter, down about 1.7 oer cent from £524 million in she first quarter. Compared with the like 1973 period, total capital spending in the second quarter was up £24 million.

The Department of Industry also says that inventories of manufacturers and distributors rose by £165 million m with a drop in stocks in the first quarter of £165 million because of the coal miners' dispute and the three-day work week.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

GM Spending in '74 a Record

General Motors has pledged its largest capital outlay ever as proof of its confidence in the future. GM chairman Richard Gerstenberg forecasts motor vehicle sales of about 13 million units during the upcoming 1975 model year and says his confidence is confirmed by "our record capital development" for new-model cars. GM is expected to spend $1.4 billion in 1974 for capital improvements in an expensive campaign highlighted by the conversion of facilities to produce more small cars. That is $100 million more than Mr. Gerstenberg forecast last year and is more than the record $1.32 billion spent in 1965. He did not detail the investments, but GM is known to have spent hundreds of millions of dollars converting manufacturing plants to increase production of small-sized cars. Mr. Gerstenberg says GM is already able to produce 70 per cent more small cars than during the 1973 model year. "These record investments, while swollen by inflation, nevertheless represent a most tangible expression of our confidence in the future of our business," he says.

Lockheed Confident About Textron Daniel Hanghton, chairman of Lockeed Aircraft Corp., is "confident" the company's planned arrangement with Textron Inc. will be realized. He says there is a good chance Lockheed will get orders for the 180 TriStars required by Textroo as part of the companies' planned arrangements. All-Nippon Airways bas just converted seven options into firm orders, and Lockheed now needs only 38 TriStar orders to meet the 180 figure. The plan envisages an equity investment by Textron in Lockheed and a restructuring of Lockheed's debt. The equity investment would total $100 million, of which Textron would provide $85 million by acquiring 12 million new common shares of Lockheed at $5 a share, and $25 million of a new Lockheed preferred stock. The remaining $15 million would come from a rights offering of three million new Lockheed common shares to Lockheed holders at $5 a share. After the purchase of 12 million Lockheed common shares, Textron would bold 45 per cent of Lockheed.

For innovative answers to your company's financial questions, consider Morgan Guaranty

Financial planning raises some of the toughest questions facing a corporate financial officer. What is the economic outlook for my industry? What is my debt capacity? Is the company's dividend policy correct? How much should I pay for an acquisition? Morgan Guaranty's unique Corporate Research Department is well-equipped to give informative answers to key questions like these—and do so on a multinational basis.

Corporate Research at Morgan is 50 financial analysts around the world. A group of them is centrally located in Paris to serve European companies. The department has these basic functions: We analyse and evaluate your company's financial forecasting, then suggest the best means of financing future needs. We conduct corporate diversification studies in a variety of industries and advise on growth strategies. In fact, we tackle virtually any sort of corporate financial question.

Three examples: We recently completed a capitalization study of the problems facing the European arm of a major U.S. company. We established the value of a merger candidate in the French food-processing industry, then advised on the securities package to finance the deal. And for companies thinking of diversifying, we've just analysed in depth the furniture industry in the U.S., warehousing in Japan, and retailing in Great Britain.

Our Corporate Research Department, operating on a fee basis, serves individuals, small companies, and the world's largest corporations. Its studies and recommendations are made in the strictest confidence and are geared entirely to finding the best solution to a client's needs. We believe no other financial institution offers our unique combination of multinational experience, skill, thoroughness, and objectivity.

For more information, talk with the Morgan officer who calls on you, or write directly to Anthony G. Bird or G. Michael Sellars, vice presidents, Corporate Research Department, at our Paris office. The address: 14, Place Vendôme.

TOKYO, Sept. 2 (AP-DJ).— Mitsubishi Chemical Industries said today its net profit soared by 107 per cent in the balf year ended July 31, but another large Japanese concern, Kirin Brewery, reported that earnings declined in the same period.

Mitsubishi said its net earnings totaled 4.77 billion yen ($18.6 mlilion) in the half year, up from 2.72 billion yen a year earlier. Sales rose to 255.1 billion yen, from 155.4 billion yen.

The company said the main reason for the sharp rise in profit was strong demand for cokes and aluminum and brisk exports of fertilizer and raw material for synthetic fiber.

Kirin Brewery profit fell to 4.8 billion yen in the half year from 5.1 billion yen in the same period year earlier. Sales declined to 257.8 billion yen from 261.9 bil-

The company set an unchanged semi-annual dividend of 3.75 yen. It forecast that net profit for the half year ending Jan. 31 would be 4 billion yen, down from 44 billion yen a year earlier.

New Floods Seen In Bangladesh

DACCA, Sept. 2 (AP).-Experts today predicted a second round of devastating floods for Bangladesh as rivers rose steadily, aggravating the situation in the north and northeast of the country.

Bangladesh is slowly recovering from its worst floods in decades. Officials described the situation in Sylhet, Kushtia, Rangour and Chittagong as critical, The rise in river levels follows incessant rain in the last few days. The Chittagong-Bandarban road is under water in several places and the road link between Chittagong and the coast town of Cox's Bazar may be cut at any time, officials said.

STRICTLY PERSONAL By John Eisenhower. Doubleday. 412 pp. $10.95.

Reviewed by Edwin Newman

NOBODY who reads "Strictly Personal" will dislike John Eisenhower. He is plainly a wellmeaning and dutiful man. Equally out of the question, however, is affection, admiration or indeed feeling of any kind. It is a book that brings no reaction at all.

The difficulty is that, as the son of one of the most important men of the century. Eisenhower observed great events but did not participate in them. He writes, therefore, as somebody not closely enough involved to have much inside information to pass along, and not sufficiently detached to have an independent point of

This handicap might be over-come were he advancing a thesis, but he is not: In fact, he tells us at the outset, "I have attempted to avoid editorializing as much as possible." The handicap might be overcome if he were a gifted, or even a lively, writer but he is not. One runs into such pronounce-ments as this on the early days of his courtship of Barbara Thompson, the woman he mar-ried: "How the two of us held up with a schedule of long working days and night-clubbing to late hours I can attribute only to youth.

Or this rare attempt at humor That evening, Dad, (Christian) Herter, (Harold) Macmillan, and (Selwyn) Lloyd conferred private-Meetings with the British were always eased by the fact that the two nationalities speak relatively similar languages."

Here and there, he does "editorialize". He says that it was wrong of Adlai Stevenson to bring the issue of a nuclear test ban into the 1952 campaign and he makes this comment on a conversation he had with his father and Omar Bradley: "Our points were perhaps technical and theoretical, but the incident illustrates the propensity of soldiers to talk shop and, like other human beings to differ in their views based on their individual subiective experiences."

Being an Eisenhower had its advantages, but it was not always easy. As an Army officer, John Eisenhower had at times to fight off special treatment, and he had to consider the possibility of sulcide in case he was captured in Korea so that, as a prisoner, he could not be used to bring pressure on the United States. Eventually the tension between pursuing his own career and being his father's son became too much for him and he left the Army in 1961.

Winning a world title might seem to disqualify anyone for the doubtful distinction of being the unluckiest player in the tourna-ment. Yet Fritzi Gordon of Britain can be said to have achieved this improbable double at the world pair championships in Las Palmas in May.

Mrs. Gordon knew that if she and her partner, Rixi Markus, could win the women's world pair title they would have the master points and the victory requirements to become the first women grandmasters, joining 30 men in that rank,

They won the women's pairs by a handsome margin, regaining the title they had previously won in 1962, but only Mrs. Markus became a grandmaster. At meetings in Las Palmas, the World Bridge Federation downgraded the women's pairs, giving the winners 35 master points instead

This left Mrs. Gordon 8 points short of the required total of 200 points, and she will have to wait two years for an opportunity to make up the deficit and gain the coveted grandmaster title.

Mrs. Gordon was the heroine of a fine defensive play on the disgramed deal played in another tournament. It was reported in the book "Aces and Places" by Mrs. Markus, the partner with whom she has shared a string of international successes in the last quarter of a century.

The bidding is not on record, but many roads would lead to six spades. The sequence shown begins with a strong two-bid, for which South is doubtfully qualified. After an encouraging raise, he signs off in game, but blds the slam when North makes a cue-bid in clubs. Most American experts would open with two clubs, strong and artificial and the slam would be played from the North side of the table.

Although the North-South partners have a five-five trump and 33 high-card points, betw. them, the slam turns out to a poor proposition. This is lay enough to have complete dupl tion of distribution and was strength in clubs, If South held the diamond queen inst of the club queen, the slam we have been a certainty. South did the best he or by winning the opening diam-lead, drawing trumps, and ca-ing two club winners. He t took his remaining diam-winner and exited with a c mond, giving Mrs. Gordon, West, a difficult problem. A club play would have b fatal, allowing South to ruff one hand and discard a he loser from the other. And a heart lead would have given declarer three heart tricks

Courageous Gets Call to Defend America's Cup

NEWPORT, R.I., Sept., 2 (UPI). -Courageous, believed finished as a possible contender in her battle to defend the America's Cup. today shocked sailing experts with an easy victory over Intrepid and was named to defend the United States in the yachting classic.

The New York Yacht Club selection committee announced the choice shortly after Courageous finished 1 minute 48 seconds ahead of its rival.

Before today, the boats had been tied at four victories each in their final-round head-tohead meetings. However, Intrepid had won the last three races and was thought almost the sure choice before the upset. One committee member, who asked not to be identified, said that today's huge margin was the "If the race had been close we

White House Invitation

I was sitting on the porch of our rented house in Martha's Vineyard reading "Six Crises" for the seventh time when the call from Washington came. It was my secretary, Ellie, who said in a breathless voice, "The White House just telephoned. President and Mrs. Ford want you to come to a state dipver Friday night."

"Ob, My God," I said. "What is it?" my wife said when she saw my face. "What's wrong?" "President Ford wants us to come Buchwald ta dinner Friday night." "Hurry up and get off the phone," she said. "I have to call Oscar de la Renta and order a vew evening gown." "Wait a minute, social climber." I said. "Not so fast. We have to think this one out. I told Ellie I would call her back."

"What is there to think out?" my wife said. "We've been invited the President of the United States for dinner. We have to

"It's vot that simple. Dov't you see what they're trying to do? It's the old 'invite the columnist to the White House, trick.' They're out to get me."

"How can you say that?" she demanded,

"I've never been invited to the White House-not by John F. Kennedy, not by Lyndov Baines Johnson, not even by Richard Nixon. The title of my last hook was I Never Danced at the White House.' I've made my living standing on the outside, hanging on the bars of the iron fence

E. Germany Book Show

BERLIN, Sept. 2 (UPI).—An exhibition called "The Most Beautiful Books From All Over the World" went on display in Lelpzig yesterday, the East German news agency ADN said. Publishing companies and artists from 30 countries are represented in the exhibit which is held under the auspices of East Germany's UNESCO commission.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD, Mass. looking in. Now the Fords are trying to destroy me by asking us to break bread with them."

> "You're being paranoid," my wife said. "Maybe they don't know many people in Washington and they've heard what a great dancer you are."

"I wish that was all there was to it. But I believe someone in the Ford administration has it in for me. Can't you see what this will do for me? If we go to that dinner, it will be reported in the press. Everyone will say I've gone in the bag for the President. My credibility as a tough, hard-driving, investigative reporter will be destroyed. People will pick up the column and say, I wonder what the freeloader has to say about Mr. Ford today.' There is UO way anyone can be objective after he's danced with the President's wife."

"Well, you can't just refuse. You'd be insulting the office of the presidency," my wife said as she started putting her hair in curiers.

"We could go sailing. If we were out in a sailboat and they couldn't find us, we wouldn't be insulting anyhody."

"But you can't sail," she oblected

"All you beed is a good sea, strong canves and a wind at your back. I read that somewhere."

"I'm not going to risk drowning just because you don't want to go to dinner at the White House."

"What option do we have?" I said. "The Fords haven't given us any choice. Do you realize a piece of roast beef in the East Room could destroy our way of life as we know it? Threats I can take, IRS audits I can deal with. I don't even mind having my telephone tapped. But there is uo way I can fight an invitation to a state dinner."

"Then I can't call Oscar de la Repta?" she asked crestfallen. "Nat unless he makes yellow slickers for sailboats," I said.

I called hack Ellie. "Ellie, tell the White House that you can't reach us that we're somewhere between Nantucket and Cape Hatteras on a boat, And one more thing-do you have a dictionary there? Look up starboard, and tell me if it's the right side or the left side of a boat,"

The Villa America (4000 the Villa Fiamma) as it looks today.

Retreat Of the Lost Of the '20s

By Jeffrey Robinson

CAP D'ANTIBES, France (IHT).—Villa America might well be the best known wills in 20th century American literature . . . a summer retreat nearly a half century ago where the lost generation partied and wrote and slept: Fitzgerald. MacLeish. Hemingway. Dos Passos. It was Villa Disna in "Tender Is The Night." Today it still sits among eucalyptus trees, a kilometer or so inland from the Garoupe Plaga and is called Villa Fiamma.

It's owned by Edmond Uher, an &2-year-old engineer whose name is synonymous with tape recording and stareo equipment. "I bought the villa in 1950 or so from Gerald and Sara Murphy. but never met them. It was purchased through an inter-mediary. I then sold off some of the land and redid a great deal. I'm afraid that when the Murphys lived here, Villa

America closely resembled a railway station. Built in 1914 and called the Chalet des Nielles, the threestory, 16-room house passed hands three times before Gerald Murphy bought it. The City Hall archives in Antibes show that he took possessiou in 1926 and it seems the first thing he did was to have an American architect redo the place. Then, by acquiring small tracts of property over the next three or four years, his was by 1930 the second largest estate on the Only the one that helonged to the Aga Khan was larger. Murphy added a small house, an atelier the listed his profession at City Hall as artiste peintre), two cabanas, and garage with living quarters. (He had already cleared the Garoupe Place, built cabanas there and claimed it as his own. i Across the Chemin des Nielles from Villa America he purchased a small farm (new the Ferme des Orangers) and called it "the cowshed," housing overflow guests there. However, the special guests either got to stay in the villa or nearby in the guest house which is today part of a neighboring property . . . at least the two people who might remember say it was this way.

"Our memories can play tricks on us because 40 or 45 years ago is way back when," Marie Revello said. Sha and her husband Joseph now live in the old atelier which they bought from Mr. Uher and remodeled, "Mr. Murphy sometimes worked here with his friend Mr. (Fernand) Leger.

The Revellos were the Murphys' chiefs of staff from 1926 "The family was only here about two months a year, yet they maintained the house and the staff all year long. There were seven gardeners and five or six inside the house. Mr. Murphy was pleasant and always planning parties. Mrs.

Murphy was very kind and we who worked for her were always very content. Whatever we needed we got because Mrs. Murphy always saw to that."

She also remembers some of the guests. "There were many friends and many fetes." Leger she saw frequently. Hemingway wasn't famous then and neither she nor her husband can recall just which one he was, although they do remember a little boy coming down with whooping cough while staying in the guest bouse and being quarantined and knowing that Gerald Murphy was worded about his own children catching it. That little boy was Hemingway's son Bumby.

Scott Fitzgerald is only a blur in their combined memories but Zelda is not. Mrs. Revello nods. I remember that woman very well. I could never forget her. She drank a great deal. A pitcher of martinis at a time. And she laughed and dauced and must have said many strange things because people were always looking at her strangely. She was, as we say, fada ta bit crazy). But she was also the most beautiful woman here."

Then one day everything began to change. One of the Murphy children had developed tuberculosis and the family went to Switzerland where the air was better. The friends didn't come. The parties ended. The house was rented.

When his son died, Gerald Murphy said he never wanted to return to Villa America. The war years left it empty, and Edmond Uher heard it was up for sale in 1949.

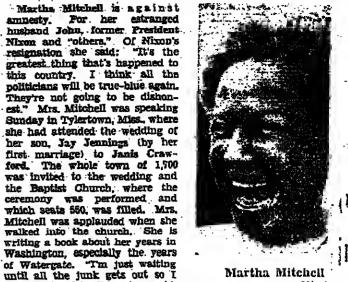

"I had been renting next door and didn't know anything about the Murphys except that they wanted to sell Villa America. Many people had a great fear just after the war that the Russians were going to attack Europe and the main condition Murphy set down was that the sale of the property be handled in American dollars. No one knew how much he wanted so I made an offer and two days later he cabled me saying OK."

At the time of the sale there were a total of six bouses on property, so Mr. Uher divided what he could and kept only the main villa. His estate is about half the size of what it was when Gerald Murphy owned it.

"I changed a good many things. There was, for instance, a large stairway at the entrance which I took down. There were two bedrooms on the main floor which I made into one large living room. I'm afraid my taste and the Murphys' taste were not quite compatible. The American architect they had hired didn't know the Mediterranean and the villa didn't fit in here. Maybe it would have worked in Beverly Hills, but Villa America wasn't for the south coast of France."
